Myths about Apprenticeships

GET YOUR FACTS STRAIGHT

Rosie
Digital Apprentice, EY

It's time to shake the stigma attached to apprenticeships...

● FICTION

An apprenticeship is not a proper job.

FACT

Apprentices get paid to work on projects that contribute to the business.

WHY?

Think apprentices get lumped with tedious tasks like refilling staplers? Nuh-uh. Apprentices are given real responsibility from day one, working alongside experienced professionals to ensure they gain the skills and technical knowledge they need to succeed in the industry. Sounds like a job to us.

● FICTION

Apprenticeships are for school dropouts and underachievers.

FACT

More and more high-achieving students are choosing to do apprenticeships.

WHY?

Ambitious school leavers are skipping three years of studying and student loans to go straight into careers with employers like EY, J.P. Morgan and Unilever. The traditional mindset that university is the default route to success is just no longer true.

● FICTION

Apprentices are financially worse off than graduates.

FACT

An apprenticeship is a debt-free path to success.

WHY?

Apprentices earn money whilst being trained in the soft skills that employers are struggling to find amongst graduates. The Sutton Trust revealed that higher apprentices can expect to earn £50,000 more in their lifetime than those who go to university.

● FICTION

University degrees are needed for most jobs.

FACT

Apprenticeships offer entry-level routes into hundreds of different careers.

WHY?

With so many top employers running apprenticeship schemes, it's worth asking yourself if you even need to go to university to land your dream role. These days you can do an apprenticeship in any number of high-skilled professions; from engineering to law, architecture and nursing.
